

National Cancer Institute
National Institutes of Health
Department of Health & Human Services
Bethesda MD

Postdoctoral Fellowship Position in Bioinformatics

The Biometric Research Branch (BRB) of the Division of Cancer Treatment and Diagnosis in NCI is now accepting applications for a post-doc fellowship position in bioinformatics. For this position, we are seeking an individual with a recent PhD in bioinformatics or related disciplines providing training and experience in programming and understanding of biology. He or she should be motivated, able to work well in teams, and have excellent communication skills. Ideal applicant will have proficiency in programming using Perl, JavaScript, R, and experience in MySQL and Linux operating system environment. Activities will include, but not limited to: development and maintaining of web applications for use of next-generation sequencing data in oncology clinical trials. To apply, applicants should submit the following: brief description of research interests and career goals, CV, and contact information for three references to Dr. Yingdong Zhao at zhaoy@mail.nih.gov

Postdoctoral Fellowship Position in Biostatistics

The Biometric Research Branch (BRB) of the Division of Cancer Treatment and Diagnosis in the National Cancer Institute is now accepting applications for a post-doctoral fellowship position in biostatistics. For this position, we are seeking an individual with a recent PhD in biostatistics, bioinformatics or related disciplines. The position involves developing statistical methods for high throughput sequencing data for cancer studies. A strong background in statistics, computing and genomics and expertise working with sequencing data is preferred. To apply, applicants should submit the following: brief description of research interests and career goals, CV, and contact information for three references to Dr. Eric Polley at eric.polley@nih.gov

DHHS, NIH and NCI are Equal Opportunity Employers